Last light sets the scene

This beautiful image by Wendy Stanford received this years' J & J Dallinger Memorial Trophy.

Wendy planned out this shoot at a time when they had been having lovely sunsets because of the smoke haze from burning off in the area. It was taken around 6pm late Autumn out the back of their property at a location know as Ned Kelly's Lookout. Having shot from this area many times Wendy knew where the sun would be setting in relation to the other components of the scene. Out of several images Wendy preferred this one in the portrait orientation as it gave the foreground more impact.

This was taken on a Sony A7111R, 24-105mm f4 lens - 1/15s @f/13, ISO 200 in Aperture Priority on a tripod.

Shooting with her camera set to Raw, Wendy does the bulk of her processing in Adobe Raw. Photoshop was then used for any final adjustments including Levels, Curves, Cropping, cleaning up the image and making sure the horizon was straight.

Annual awards night

Last month's meeting was an opportunity to give recognition for the efforts members have made to enter their best work throughout the year. It was great to see everyone's best images on display again. It is always good to reflect on the work we have done over the 12 months and choose our favourites for this competition. Congratulations to all those who received an award and also to those who kept taking and submitting their best, throughout what was a challenging year.

Capturing the mood of winter

The recent cold and overcast conditions has perhaps left us feeling a little uninspired for outdoor photography. However, there are other opportunities that winter can present. So why not rug up, embrace the bleakness and go in search of some moody winter shots? You might be surprised to see that bare trees and colourless landscape can in fact create a striking image.

Keep an eye out for colour that when included will stand out against the dullness. Minimalism and winter go well together. Foggy conditions can assist with this look. Remember 'Simplicity' is an up coming competition theme. So lets put a positive slant to winter and enjoy getting out in search of a different look and create some great moody shots.

The Exhibition will be open to the general public from the 6th September for at least two weeks and will then continue for the next 9 months if the photographer chooses. There is limited space for about 18 to 20 photos so the competition is limited to Wodonga Albury Camera Club financial members only.
